Five years ago the editor of the Yeoman would have scouted the idea of supporting Frank Blair, a Union General, for any office whatsoever. Ten years ago the editor of the Yeoman would have pledged himself for life against she thirteenth amendment. But was he not right in supporting Frank Blair? Is he not wise in recognizing the existence, whatever may be his opinions of the abstract justice and legality, of the thirteenth amendment?

Universal suffrage, when applied to an ignorant populace, is one of the most dangerous elements which can be introduced into any system of government; the description of political stability; the friend of mobile was med the agent of agrarianism. But uppose the fifteenth amendment should be passed and all the negroes should be entranchised—suppose tha question of negro suffrage abould be out of the way—suppose that only white men and Chinamen are distranchised, and that, under this supposititions condition, some party, in order to get rid of the blighting influence of negro suffrage and the distranchisement of great masses of intelligent and industrious titizeas, should propose "universal suffrage and universal amnesty"—and there is the price of the party and there is the price of the party and there is the price of the price of the party and there is the price of the party and the price of the party and there is the price of the party and the price of the supposititious condition, some party, in order to get rid of the hilghing influence of negro suffrage and the distranchisement of great masses of intelligent and industrious clitzens, should propose "universal suffrage and univeral amnesty"—and there should be no other outlet or mode of relief —where would the Yeoman stand? Would it stand with the negroes as against the white men, and in favor of negro suffrage as against the entranchisement of its rebel comrades? We make bold to answer for it. It would not.

There is an interesting controversy going on in the late Republic of Texas as to who shall write the biography of Sam. Houston, the hero of San Jacinto. The quarrels of Maurice Strakosch, the pianist—Impressario—Invoker-in-law of the world-renowne? Patti, with that pet of the porra, have been the theme of innumerable newspaper paragraphs in the way of business. The last one is that Maurice, who 'trained' (whatever that is) Adelina, has been at day grees'-points with the little woman for marrying Caux, and thus escaped being managed by her brother-in-law for his benefit principally. The unplessantness has, however, just been made up, and the "Marchloness" has kindly towenied to come to America and sing once again, after which she will return as La Marquise de Caux only, sandotas a prima doma, to Europe, and there take her place probably at the French Court, which ashe has not been shie to do so long as she was on the boards. It is gratifying to note the fact that a love of the better class of music has developed sufficiently here to warrant our dealers in importing the best defitions of the works of Beetheven, Mosart, Haydu, Schubert, Bach, Weber, Ciementi, Dansek, Gliock, Handel, Rossini, Bellini, Boltilier, Heroid, Chopin, Haller, Schumann and others. Among the standard editions issued lately is Litofff a library of classic masic, comprising the principal works of the above-mentioned masters. In beauty and chespness they are unrivalled. A fine musical library to those who love the art for art's sake is never ending source of delight and recreation. There is no more fascinating reading in literature than a volume Beethous will affect one whose taste is sufficiently enlivated to appreciate the beauties and wondrous harmonics of that great composer. Mr. D. P. The London Speciator has hereiofore been one of Gen. Grant's best friends as England, praising him upon all occasions. But it now changes its tune, and speaks thus of him in an article which we find reproduced in a New York paper: "The gradual decline of President Grant in American opinion is noteworthy, for there is listic evidence of any strong political reason. He is very leadent to Conservatives, but that may be wise; and he has failed to oust the politicians by trade, but that may not be his fault; and he writes rather indiscrect interes, but the letters are sound enough in principle. Nevertheless, it is certain that, for some reason not quite perceptible over here, a tone of contempt towards the President as becoming apparent in both parties."

What is likely to occur in this country during the next quarter of a country during the next quarter of a country attords to all intelligent Americans a most interesting field, not merely for apeculation, but for careful investigation. We all know quite certainty what the population of the United States will be, and we have a general idea as to have large an extent of country will be comprised under our flag. Statisticians also can give an aproximate community of the humber of miles of rail-rail of the present century and country by the close of the present centure country by the close of the present centure country by the close of the present centure of the

In the first place, it is reasonably certain that, within the next thirty years, wa shall have be great way. The shollish of shvery and the practical fullers of the extreme doctine of state-rights have actined the only quasitions which, in all human probability, would lead to drill war.

As to foreign wars, a confist with any of the powers on this continuous largice or Brazil, it would have but little appreciable effect upon the social and industrial future of the country.

upon the social and industrial future of the country.

A war with France, or any European power but Engiand, a very improbable, but, should one take piace, it would be mainly a naval conflict. France might succeed for a white is blockeding our principal ports, but she could land no army upon our shores, nor could we secure a ledgmass on the count of France. Spain is too contemptible a military power to take into consideration. In the contingency of a foreign war, the only serious struggle we could have would be with Great Britain; and, in this case, Canada would be the battle-ground. All the power of Engiand could not hold that province against the United States for more than a coughle of years after a declaration of war between the two constries.

There seems, therefore, to be no impedituant country in the country was a construction of war that the next thirty years will see in the United States on augmentation of waith and increase of industrial scivity such as no nation mentioning and a province against the continuous country and the province against the control of the country of t

There was a time, within the memory of people now living, when it was possible for one to be a dry goods merchant with a capital of fifteen thousand dolliars, he would be a linustic who would now think of entering the continuous of the continuous and the continuous of at least a quarter of a million.

According to the statistics of commerce, thucty-five persons in every hundred who cuter a commercial life fall, and but five persons in every hundred who cuter a commercial life fall, and but five persons in the states after represents all the toodabiders next; they, too, is all hamn-probability, will loss the principal of their investments.

This tendency has become so universal in all channels of trade, that prudent men are beginning to doubt the propriety of investing any money is joint-stock companies.

Already some of the large manufacturing establishments are following the bad example of the railroad monopolies, and it requires only some exceptionable excitement, like the fancous periodem bubble, to show that the great mass of the projectors of companies are intent not upon developing the resources of the country so much as "exploiting," would-be shareholders and bayers of stock. I condicately predict that the time is not far distant when all joint-stock companies, including manufacturing establishments, life and sire warnes, banks, and the like, will pass into individual hands at the expense of the present shareholders. The history of the califorative of the companies, including an enterprises. There is something to opporate unanagement secentially lattify, as it not only develops individual selfathness at the expense of the other corporators, but of fers peculiar facilities for depriving the latter of their preperty.

At the same time, the necessities of commerce are so great, the variety of individual hands at the response of the other corporators, but of fers peculiar facilities for depriving the latter of their preperty.

At the same time, the necessities of commerce are so great, the variety of industrial enterprises is so tempting, that I have no doubt that the rest ten years will see an enormous development of corporate sanagement by the ora satisfactor of joint-stock companies.

But I insist that, so matter how promising the various programmers of these corporations may be, the system Uself can have but one is succe-the accretion of vast weath in the hands of a few persons, at the expense of the people who invest their savings in these corporations.

Another luftmence which will help to accamulate large fortunes is the rasing walse of land. We are not likely to be curred in this country with the reign of enormous land-morpolies, such as obtain in Great Brillain the equal division of property at the death of the parent forbids that. But we must not overlook serves, in concentrating lands in fewer and still fewer hands.

Ten or fifteen years ago our agricultural papers were loudly demanding of farmers that they should dispose of their surplus lands, have fewer acres, but farm these better. It was argued that a good farm of a few abrea was better than the poor farming of a great many, and there was a great deal of nonsense writing about the news account, and even writing about the news account of a great many, and there was a great deal of nonsense writing about the news account of a great land of a great land of the news account of the news of a fraid-class moders farm requires agreed extended of account of the news account of the new account of the news account of the new account of the new a lew hands. Within that there is no occupant to unpromisable to be a small farmer, except in the immediate vicinity of a large city.

The competition of Mongolians will probably, in time, drive our native laboring-classes out of the smaller and rader occupations: R has done so already in California. The large amount of Chinese immigration yet to come will cause this question of occalled Coolie labor to become a more serious problem to solve than was that of Arican slavey. It is surrounded with difficulties, with prejudiese of sees of rees, of religion, said of as entirely different civilisation, and will, in the future, for evirably create grave distantances.

But the Mongolian has commenced the Mill for the set quarter of a century—not in adulties, as now, but in armies. This Asiatic labor will be found useful on the farm and in the ridge industries; it will relieve the white American from a great deal of drudgery, and will onable birs, perhaps, to turn his more active brain and stronger hody to pursuite that are really more lucrature to himself and more advantageous to the community.

But these Mongolians will be added to the wage-receiving class; and, when the country the commendation of the facility with which they might be sequired, have hopped to encourage small farmers, and build up minor industries, and to diffuse wealth among a large part of the population. What will be the probable moral condition of the American people in the year 1800? I am a real that the social philosopher cannot look at the future without a great deal of apprehension. Our wealth will be secured under conditions that certainly will not favor a great moral development. To Country Merchants and Dragglets.

We call the expecial attention of the country merchants and dragglets now in the city purchasing their fall stocks to the advertisements of Dr. vessions mith's valuable proprietary medicines. They possess a great deal more than ordinary monit, and have proven to be very popular wherever sold, superseding any preparations of similar kind they come in competition with. No sicch of medicines is complete without them. For sale by all our wholesale drugglets.

Show-cases Silver and Wooden.
We offer to the fall trade a very superior artile of metal and wooden cases. Fitch & Lindsoy, Atterney, which probably accounts for their dread of her.

About four o'clock yesterday aftermon a fire was discovered in the coal-house of a dwelling next door to flower Hall, on Savonth street, marrichestnut. It communicated to one of the long shade, which are in the yard of the frisk, and burned about one-third of it. Had the burning property issue of more substantial maiorisk, or had it been in putiaposition to the rink, that place would have been deepered motivated in maiorisk, or had it been in putiaposition to the rink, that place would have deepered to the doors and windows. The lairn was given from Eighth and Chestaus, but did not reach the central office, and the bells were not rung till some one ran to the entire-bouse on Jesterson street. During the fire at Fortland, several nights ago, the lines were injured, and at the time of the alarm yesterday the worksman was repairing them at that place, which, in thacticult, lieb between Eighth and Chestmin End. circuit, lieb between Eighth and Chestmin and the central station. This accounts for the sionness of the fire department which was the wonder on all hands. Br. Glover's loss was slight.

The Odd Fellows' Peds.

The fatr in Odd Fellows' Hall for the beneat of helfvicoses' and Orphus' Home was well attended last night, and the receipts were larger than on any previous evening. A great many a sidilations have been made since the opening to the stores of articles for sale, and the tables are increasing, instead of decreasing, in their attractions. The Cincinnati and Louisville Mail Line Louppany has donated a number of very large clons. The Cinciment and Louisville Mail Line Company has donated a number of very large and beautiful cakes to the ladies, in addition to those presented by the hotels. The fair will be continued in the eventue during the week, and a fine lunch will be served from 10 to 3 o'clock each

JULIE MURRAY. A Regular, Straight-Out Jeff. Davis

A Regular, Straight-Ont Jeff. Davis Woman.

There is a weman named Julie Murray, an old acquaintance of the Police Court and the Workhouse, and not a total stranger to the hospitals and poor-houses of the city, who is at times a source of much ammenen to the loungers of Court Place and the Jail. She dresses in a gesticel manner, but is a confirmed and venerable drunk-ard. When in her merriest mood and joiliest whisky, she visis her old friends around the juli and Court Place, and enterfains them with her story, which is invariably the same, with, however, a slight variation, or rather inherincation, riving some of the lawyers a scoring for allowing her to be sent to the workhouse at some particular time when he has pledged filmself to have
